IDEAS

I am a research scientist and engineer but have always been drawn by artistic creativity and aesthetics. I think that is why my passion of toy photography and LEGO® models is such a great match. My passion for building with LEGO bricks, combined with toy photography, makes me feel like an artist telling stories through my models and photos. My entry to the LEGO Ideas competition was also inspired by a story of an adventure that my wife and I still have to experience. We have done a lot of travelling and living abroad, but we have never had the opportunity to go on a sailboat and set sails for the horizon. The sailboat is named “Éloïse” after our daughter, so this is really a celebration of us as a family, which makes it so much more than just a sailboat to me: it’s a dream-come-true, like a perfect holiday. Whenever I look at my model on my desk, I begin to dream of cruising around exotic destinations, to the sound of the ocean and the dolphins playing around the sailboat. These are the stories that I want to tell with my models, and I am just so happy and honoured that this exact story received so much support from the community. I am so proud of winning the competition, because when you are doing something so important to you, you easily doubt your own skills and ideas. There are so many great builders out there in the community, so it was quite intimidating submitting an entry for the first time. I could not have done this without my wife's support, feedback and inspiration, so without her, I am not sure I would ever have entered the competition. My best piece of advice for any builder of tomorrow, who wants to join a LEGO Ideas competition, is to find a concept and hold on to it. When working with a creative challenge, too often people start over instead of refining and improving the initial concept they felt inspired by. Show and share your work with friends and family, because you will need their feedback, ideas, knowledge and inspiration, to create something that is truly meaningful and impressive. And when doing something that you are truly proud of, it is also important to have someone to share it with.
